Rumania-USSR: New tension between Bucharest and Moscow suggests that the recent Soviet -Rumanian talks failed to resolve outstanding differences.

Rumania's leading economic journal on 13 June vigorously attacked a proposal in a Soviet academic publication to establish a production complex which would include Rumanian, Bulgarian, and Soviet territory. Bucharest charged the plan is "designed to dismember Rumania's unity as a nation and state."

The Rumanian article also contained the first hint of the possibility of Soviet economic reprisals against the Galati steel combine and Rumanian preparations to counteract them.

About a week ago Bucharest--somewhat more mildly--attacked as "erroneous" a 30 May Soviet broadcast to Rumania implicitly criticizing the regime's views on CEMA and its negotiations with the West.

The US Embassy in Bucharest believes these Rumanian comments reflect such a high degree of sensitivity that they "may very well foreshadow direct public polemics" between Rumania and the USSR.

Somali Republic: The government of Prime Minister Abdirazak, which took office on 14 June, will be more friendly toward the US, but probably cannot alter the basic policies of the country. Abdirazak may attempt to keep Somali guerrilla activity in Ethiopia and Kenya down at its current low level, but no Somali government can refuse to support long-standing irredentist claims against these countries. Moreover, the border clashes with Ethiopia earlier this year apparently have convinced most Somalis of the necessity for the $35-million military assistance agreement which the previous government concluded with the USSR.
